

McHenry County – Government Center

Woodstock, Illinois

Hoffman was responsible for the architecture and construction management of the McHenry County (Woodstock, Illinois) Government Center, a 71,000 square foot administration building that was designed to be energy efficient without requiring LEED certification. Highlighted features of the project include storm water retention on site, a high level of systems control, and a reporting and monitoring system for the building's energy management system.

The building's layout dramatically improved the departmental relationships and adjacencies, creating better overall productivity and worker efficiencies. In addition, the building is very public friendly, with all public services located just a short distance from the entrance and elevators.

Scope

New Construction

Area

71,000 sq. ft.

Completion Date

October 2004

