

Fox Valley Plastic Surgery – Renaissance Center

Oshkosh, Wisconsin

Based in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, The Renaissance Center, home of Fox Valley Plastic Surgery, is both a free-standing outpatient surgical center and a medical spa. The layout of the 23,000 square foot facility is that of two distinct buildings—one for the clinical practice of the physicians and medspa (located on the second floor) and the other for the outpatient surgery and recovery center (found on the main floor).

Although each area is designed to function independently, the facility is one connected building, offering efficiency and convenience for the shared staff. Due to the sensitive nature of The Renaissance Center, the project included a heated, enclosed garage for patients' privacy and protection while entering or exiting the facility and tinted windows throughout the center which allow patients to see out, but keep outsiders from seeing in.

Great effort was taken with the Tuscan-inspired design to ensure the facility was distinctive from other recent developments throughout the city. The use of columns and moldings, traditional stone and stucco on walls, covered colonnades and open rooftop patios and balconies, wrought-iron railings, and a clay-tiled roof, helped to create the Renaissance experience strongly desired and communicated by the doctors and staff.
